Survey conducted by students

Survey on Analyzing the Causes of Truancy in School Setting

The students of department of psychology had conducted a survey to analyze causes of truancy in school settings. A sample of 306 students of KMHSS School, Malappuram were administered with 102 questions on 21/11/2018. Prior permission was taken from the school authority to conduct a survey. All of the students belonged to the age category 9 to 12, which is considered as the phase of late childhood. The questions were designed as such which aims at determining the possible causal factors of truancy. The factors were titled under five subheadings: Attitude, behaviour, school atmosphere, peer group influence and parenting. Based on the primary analysis, 31 questions were omitted and the rest 71 questions were administered to the same sample. It was found that school atmosphere is a major determinant of truancy followed by parenting, attitude and peer influence. Media is shown to have comparatively a lesser determinant of truancy. The survey was effective in knowing the causal factors of truancy and is an introductory to various methods which can be implemented to prevent truancy.
